Local Option Laws are Being Strictly Enforced

West Plains, Mo., July 19—Violators of the local option law in South Missouri counties are being given pretty stiff fines by judge and jury. Not long ago Judge Evans fined one man, who had been convicted in the Howell county circuit court of selling liquor illegally, a total of over $3,000, and he was told that he would have to serve out the fine in jail.

A few days ago Marion Shaver a former Howell county man, entered a plea of guilty to "bootlegging" whiskey, in the circuit court at Alton, in Oregon county, and was fined $300 on each of seven counts, making a total of $2,100. Being unable to pay the fine he was committed to the county jail at Alton.

Rufus McDonald, who pleaded guilty in the same court to violating the local option law, was also fined $300 each on several counts. Judge Evans is particularly strict in the enforcement of the local option laws, although he has frequently paroled men who have promised him that if given their liberty they would go and sin no more.

Down here in the logging camps, far removed from a railroad, "bootleggers" have heretofore plied their nefarious trade with great profit. But the officers have become so vigilant and the courts have become so severe in assessing punishment, that many of the illicit stills have shut up shop and the violators of the local option law are either in jail or have turned their attention to honest pursuits.
